Overview

ABSTRACT

En 2001, l'Organisation Mondiale de la Santé, en collaboration avec l'UNICEF, l'UNESCO et l'ONUSIDA, ainsi qu'avec l'appui technique des CDC, a initié le développement de l'enquête mondiale réalisée en milieu scolaire sur la santé des élèves (GSHS).

Dès 2003, les Ministères de la Santé et de l'Education du monde entier, ont utilisé l'enquête GSHS pour surveiller la prévalence des comportements à risque pour la santé et les facteurs de protection les plus importants.

A ce jour, 127 pays dans le monde ont réalisé le GSHS, Wallis et Futuna l'ont réalisé en mai 2015. Des fiches sont maintenant disponibles pour 87 pays.

Le but de l'enquête GSHS est d'obtenir des informations systématiques des élèves pour appuyer les programmes de santé scolaire pour les jeunes, ainsi que les politiques au niveau mondial.

L'objectif principal de l'Enquête GSHS est de produire des données précises sur les comportements liés à la santé et les facteurs de protection chez les élèves pour:

- Aider les pays à développer des priorités, établir des programmes et préconiser des ressources pour la santé scolaire, ainsi que des programmes et politiques de santé pour les jeunes ;
- Etablir des courbes de prévalence des comportements de santé et des facteurs de protection pour une utilisation et une évaluation de la santé scolaire et une promotion de la santé des jeunes ;
- Permettre aux pays, organisations internationales et autres de faire des comparaisons entre les pays sur la prévalence des comportements de santé et des facteurs de protection.
