Overview

ABSTRACT
The objective of the second round of the World Bank high frequency mobile phone survey was to measure the continued socioeconomic impacts of COVID-19 in Papua New Guinea, including on livelihoods, food security, and public safety and security. The length of the survey was limited to 15 minutes and the survey instrument consisted of the following modules: Basic Information, Employment and Income Loss, Food Access and Food Security, Health, Public Trust and Security, and Assets and Wellbeing. The questions on employment and income were asked to the respondent and to the household head if different from the respondent. The recall period for current employment was in the previous week. In addition, retrospective questions were asked for new respondents about the baseline ("the start of this year 2020") as well about the situation at the time of round 1 in June ("June, around the time of the Queen's birthday holiday"). The information from the new respondent could then be pooled with the returning respondents to have three consistent points in 2020. For retrospective questions on employment, the baseline is defined as "the start of this year 2020" and new households were asked both about the baseline as well as the situation in early July, corresponding with the implementation of round 1 of data collection. Three subsequent rounds are planned, with the next in May 2021, though the implementation calendar may be revised to respond to changing conditions on the ground.

Sampling

Sampling Procedure

The original objective of round 2 was to re-interview all households and respondents that were interviewed in round 1. There is high turnover of SIM cards in PNG, however, as numbers must be officially registered with a valid government ID within six months of activation or they are disconnected. Overall, of the original 3,115 households and 4,528 individuals interviewed during round 1, only 951 households and 962 individuals were re-interviewed in round 2. Though a small percentage of respondents refused (less than 1 percent), the main reason for failure to re-contact was that the number was no longer working.

In addition, there were 67 households in which someone answered at the original mobile number, but they were not a part of the original household. Therefore 1,804 additional households were added for the second round, for a total sample size of 2,820 households and 3,368 individuals in round 2.

To attempt to address some of the issues seen in round 1 in terms of the skew towards the higher deciles of the wealth distribution, a different targeting mechanism was used in round 2 based on subscriber characteristics derived from the Digicel database to try to address some of the skew towards richer households seen in the first round. To proxy poor households, the team targeted subscribers that did not send text messages on the assumption they were less likely to be literate. Similarly, subscribers that received only incoming calls or for whom the majority of credit was not purchased but transferred from other subscribers were thought to be more likely to be poor.

The UNICEF survey of households with children interviewed 2,449 of the 2,820 households interviewed in the second round of the World Bank survey, 86.8 percent of the total sample, and 96.6 percent of the total 2,534 that were targeted as having children under age 15. Using logit econometric model to compare the characteristics of eligible households which attritted between round 2 of the World Bank survey and the UNICEF survey, there are no statistically significant relationships accounting for the sex and education of the respondent, household wealth, and the geographic location (province, urban/ rural), with the exception of a statistically significant higher probability of attrition from those living in East Sepik Province.

For more information on sampling, please refer to the report provided in the External Resources.

Response Rate

Please check at Figure 3 in the "Background" section of the report (provided as External Resource).

Weighting

In round 1, there were two sets of primary weights calculated: those at the individual level and those at the household level. For the second round, there are four sets of primary weights: cross section weights at the household level, panel weights at the household level, cross section weights at the individual level, and panel weights at the individual level. Given the high levels of attrition, the panel weights were only used for selected analysis and the majority of the analysis relied on cross sectional weights.

The data collected from the mobile phone surveys differed substantially from the characteristics of the population as a whole, the data required reweighting. The process for reweighting was similar to that used in round 1 (see technical appendix to that report for full details).

For more information on weighting, please refer to the "Weighting" section (p.55) of the report provided in the External Resources.

The "weight" variable in the Household dataset is called "weight" whereas that in the Person dataset is called "indweight".

Questionnaires

Overview

The questionnaire - that can be found in the External Resources of this documentation - was developed both in English and in Pidgin.

The questionnaire included the following modules:
-Basic Information,
-Employment and Income Loss,
-Food Access and Food Security,
-Coping Strategies,
-Health,
-Public Trust and Security,
-and Assets and Wellbeing.

The questionnaire for the UNICEF survey included sections on:
-Basic Information, Knowledge and Behavior,
-Service Delivery,
-Roster of Children Living in the Household (including schooling status),
-Access to Health,
-Education,
-Child Discipline,
-and Life Perspectives,
It is to be noted that the latter three UNICEF sections were administered to a randomly selected child between the ages of 3-14.

Data Collection Notes

As the objective of the survey was to measure changes as the pandemic progresses, the second round of data collection sought to re-contact all 3,115 households contacted in round 1, though only 1,016 were successfully re-contacted. A small number of round 1 households declined to participate in round 2 (around 3 percent) and some started but did not complete the round 2 survey (around 2 percent). The majority of attrition was due to non-contact. Individual respondents were attempted to be reached up to seven times before the number was abandoned. In 133 cases, the person who answered the phone was not the original respondent but was a member of the original household.
As in the first round, the length of the survey was targeted as 15 minutes and the survey instrument consisted of 177 questions, but only a sub-set of questions were asked to each household, with the number of questions for returning households being substantially shorter.

The questionnaire included the following modules:
Basic Information, Employment and Income Loss, Food Access and Food Security, Coping Strategies, Health, Public Trust and Security, and Assets and Wellbeing.

As in the first round, if the respondent was not the household head, the Employment and Income Loss section included additional questions asking about the head of the household specifically.
The questionnaire for the UNICEF survey included sections on Basic Information, Knowledge and Behavior, Service Delivery, Roster of Children Living in the Household (including schooling status), Access to Health, Education, Child Discipline, and Life Perspectives, with the latter three sections being administered to a randomly selected child between the ages of 3-14.

For retrospective questions on COVID-19 related knowledge, behavior and service delivery, this survey tracked households' activities in the last 7 days, 15 days, and the 3 months, depending on the question context, with the aim to observe both the short-term and long-term social challenges and hardship in Papu New Guinea (PNG). For retrospective questions on child's education, the baseline is defined as the "2019 school year." To better distinguish the economic conditions in pre-COVID trend and the impact of shock during the COVID, households were asked about the baseline, the situation in March 2020 (before school closed as part of the first COVID-19 State of Emergency containment measures) and the current situation.

The acceptance rate was very high for connected calls, with 2 respondents being under the minimum participation age of 18 years and 98 respondents (3 percent) refusing to participate in the main survey.
The UNICEF survey was able to achieve a recontact rate of 96.6 percent of the targeted respondents. Data was collected and managed using the Survey Solutions software package.

Supervision

For both World Bank and UNICEF surveys, there was a staff of 18 interviewers and 1 supervisor.

Data Processing

Data Editing

At the end of data collection, the raw dataset was cleaned by the World Bank team. This included formatting, and correcting results based on monitoring issues, enumerator feedback and survey changes.

Data was edited using the software Stata.

Other Processing

Data was collected and managed using the Survey Solutions software package.
